SECTION 2

(Mandatory for all candidates, except for candidates applying for positions in the PhD Programme in “Law and Economics”.)

For applications for scholarship-funded positions - choice of the scholarship research topic(s) (see information provided in Annex A), ranked in order of preference where two research topics are selected For each selected research topic, the candidate must submit a separate research proposal consistent with that research topic. Therefore, where two research topics are selected, two separate research proposals must be submitted, with the relevant order of preference clearly indicated.	Candidates wishing to compete for a scholarship-funded position must indicate the selected research topic(s) from among those listed, up to a maximum of two research topics. Where two research topics are selected, the candidate must specify the order of preference as follows: Priority 1 – Insert research topic: “.....” Priority 2 – Insert research topic: “.....” The research proposal may be written in either Italian or English.  Priority 1 – Repeat the research topic: “.....” (write the research proposal here, structured in accordance with the requirements set out in Annex A)  Priority 2 – Repeat the research topic: “.....” (write the research proposal here, structured in accordance with the requirements set out in Annex A)
For applications for the position without a scholarship – free choice of the research project topic Candidates wishing to compete for the position without a scholarship must indicate the topic of their research project, which may be freely chosen. It is also permissible to select one of the research topics designated for the scholarship-funded positions. Where a candidate applying for the position without a scholarship has selected one of the research topics designated for the scholarship-funded positions, that candidate may also be considered for the possible allocation of a scholarship-funded position.	Insert the chosen research topic: “.....” (write the research proposal here, structured in accordance with the requirements set out in Annex A)
